The Iconic Song "Beauty and the Beast"

Historical Context

Released in 1991, *Beauty and the Beast*became Disney's first animated feature to earn an Academy Award nomination for Best Picture. The film's soundtrack, composed by Alan Menken with lyrics by Howard Ashman, played a pivotal role in the movie's success. The title song, performed by Angela Lansbury as Mrs. Potts, sets the stage for the film's central theme: the transformative power of love.

Lyric Breakdown

The opening lines of the song are simple yet profound:

"Beauty, beauty, oh, how she looks so pretty…
Oh, she's a very pretty girl, but she's a little bit too shy."

These verses introduce the titular character—beautiful yet restrained—while also hinting at the deeper layers of the story. The refrain, "Beauty and the Beast, the perfect pair," encapsulates the film's core message: true beauty transcends appearances.

Musical Composition

Musically, the song blends lush orchestration with a memorable melody. The use of a moderate tempo allows the audience to absorb the lyrical narrative, while the harmonic progression—moving from major to minor chords—mirrors the film's emotional journey from innocence to understanding.
